GOOD STUFF

ALL AMERICAN

Men in Minnesota were wearing Red Wing boots and toting Deleth Pack sacks long before the fashion world deserted them cool. The American Heritage movement, embraced from New York to Japan, has been a global quest to merge heartland brands. Last year, two of them, St. Paul-based J.W. Hulme Co. and Ferrispoint Hicks of Minneapolis, created Northern GRADE Men's Market as a celebration of American-made, high-grade menswear. The second annual market on September 10 promises to be bigger, showcasing 22 companies from Minnesota and beyond. These are a few of our favorites. Expect a lively day of shopping, live music, good food, and more: we'll guarantee more wearing khaki jeans and neckties than you've ever seen in one town. —A.K.
